

St Ablans Review

Wednesday 13 May 2009

Awards for working at home

It's National Work Wise Week this week... but what does this mean?

WORK Wise Week promotes smarter working practices, such as flexible, remote and mobile working, and working from home. It aims to give half the working population, some 14 million people, the opportunity to work smarter by 2011.

The week includes Mobile Office Day and Remote Office Day to encourage people to work while on the move and to use remote working instead of travelling to a central office. National Work from Home Day this Friday, May 15, is to persuade people to work from home on that day, instead of commuting to their usual place of work.

To celebrate National Work from Home Day,

Remote Employment has launched The Home Worker Awards to highlight how home working benefits the British public and their working life.

Along with a trophy to honour the home worker of the year, The Home Worker Award will supply the winner with an array of prizes to improve their 'home work'.

The Home Worker Awards is also celebrating the many millions of home businesses across the country in the national search to find the most innovative business that demonstrate how remote working and home working has made a beneficial impact on their business and home life.

Enter at www.homeworkerawards.com for your chance to win.